NEW MEN, NEW METHODS.

Considering the nomination by the Democrats of New Jersey of Woodrow Wilson, President of Princeton University, for governor of that state, the New York World says:

The Democrats of New Jersey have nominated Woodrow Wilson for governor, and the nomination means the re-establishment of the Democratic party in that state.

It is no disparagement of others to say that Mr. Wilson is preeminently qualified for leadership. He has a national reputation already. He is strong with the very elements that must be won if the Democrats are to carry New Jersey. His Democracy is like his character and abilities—wide through and through.

The illustrious nomination of Mr. Wilson will be an example of party government at its best. In personality, ideas and associations he is the synthesis of the average political leader in a town-ship and corporate community. With him in the field independent voters will not be reduced to a choice of evils.

From a point of view far above party it is not only significant but highly reassuring that the recent trend in the Democracy has been toward new leadership of the most approved type. Placed in Maine, Mass. in Massachusetts, Baldwin in Connecticut, Gaynor, Havens and Osborn in New York, Harman in Ohio and Marshall in Indiana are men of achievement and of promise among whom Wilson of New Jersey cannot fail to take high rank.

The Republican bosses and dictators have been in power too long. They have wearied the country with their broken pledges, their subservience to money, their impetuosity of humor and their selfish factionalism. They are discredited in their own household.

These things are emphatically true of New York. The legislative investigating committee is disclosing new reasons every day why the entire Republican organization should be swept out of power. Here as elsewhere thousands of Republican independents wait an opportunity to vote for truth and new Democracy. No party hacks will do. No very open the scum-bump will answer. No hounded candidate is wanted.

The new leadership must be clean, efficient, Democratic. A majority so large that it will astound the enemy awaits it in November.

THE JOY OF LIVING.

Oh, life is a wonder and death is a blunder! It's good to be living and strong. It's fine to be chatting and joking and laughing and shouting a little now and then. It's good to be working like a fellow and looking your life from out of the sun. It's good to be happy. Oh, things keep coming to the thought of life without toil. Most all the trouble and agonizing and whining is done in the future. You'll regret the follies and follies, old folks' gillies, no time to complaining, no time to skulking and rustle, they bring and they bustle, and but up they say in the sun: they move and they grow and they give a dash and a whop for the instant one. Such fellows are scarce; they're worth a case of gold. If you have nothing to do but sit and wait, you're a case of gold. If you have nothing to do but sit and wait, you're a case of gold. If you have nothing to do but sit and wait, you're a case of gold.

Twenty million dollars, it is estimated, has been or will be spent in Texas this year on good roads. Good roads have been ordered in many precincts in every part of the state and, better, practically all of them are being carried by the numerous two-cent road authorities. Undoubtedly the interest in better roads is increasing day by day and one has only to see the roads in reality to be converted to the belief of their advantage.

No town is going to grow and to prosper where its own people sit idle and don't do as much as turn their hands over to take advantage of the opportunities that are before them. No town is going to grow and to prosper where its own people sit idle and don't do as much as turn their hands over to take advantage of the opportunities that are before them.

WITH CONGRESS DEMOCRATIC.

Suppose the next House, or even the next Congress, should be Democratic. A Democratic Congress at this time would not mean what it meant in some crises of the past, when the two great parties were far apart in national issues, and when the third and fifth shared in the great divisions. The things too people demand at this time are demanded by all the people. Some of these things are that graft and favoritism be taken out of the tariff system; that the rules of the House be modified in such a way as to give the people fair representation in that body; that the tariff-making process be regulated in such a way as to restore equality of opportunity to all; that the people be given a voice in the selection of the tariff-making process; that the people be given a voice in the selection of the tariff-making process.

And the people are going to demand these things of Congress, so far as it is in the power of Congress to grant them, by making whether the Congress be Democratic or Republican. There is no very little difference between the politics of the two great parties to these questions in the matter of the tariff, for instance. No man, whether he be a Democrat or a Republican, believes in the protective principle, but is favorable to downward revision, whether he be for a tariff for revenue only or whether he be a free trader, would advocate a policy of reducing tariff from a mere revenue to the revenue basis that we would advocate.

Adjustment of the tariff must of necessity be a somewhat gradual process, just as the growth of the protective duty has been gradual. But an important development could be made more rapid progress in the direction of correcting schedules, as they are found to be excessive, than could be made with prudence by the old process of general revision, which is invariably attended by legislation by trading by the selling of the tariff-making process.

It is true that the Democrats in Congress voted against the tariff commission feature of the present law along with the other features of the law, but this does not mean that they would not favor the right kind of commission as an abstract proposition. For even the Democrats would not take the position that the present tariff law is that of revenue only, but a single piece, even if they could yield both Congress and the president, Kansas City Star.

SUCCESS TO THE TIPLESS HOTEL

A year and a half ago the first class was opened in London. The management "positively announced" that no gratuities to waiters, porters, maids or other employees would be permitted or suffered. The "experiment" as every body called it, seemed extremely interesting, but the result was somewhat doubtful. Skipper said: "Wait a month or two."

The hotel is now a year old, says the Chicago Record-Herald. The public is assured that the policy has been enforced in the letter, that the establishment has prospered beyond all expectations, and that there has been no loss of business in paying employees—and good, fit, well-mannered employees, too.

This is very gratifying news to us. Presumably the hotel was "in need" of some kind of compensation for the services of its employees. It is not likely that it is difficult to see how it is possible to overlook these outside interests, outside money is not seeking investments in towns where the people are not alive to their opportunities. There must be a cooperation on the part of the local people. They must themselves be up and doing and then outside interests will be attracted and will cause the town to flourish.
